I am commenting on a proposal for LNG to be exported by Pieridae Energy, using the M&N pipeline. I think giving them approval is a terrible idea.

Since you are looking at public good and public interest, how good would it be for climate change? We need to reduce emissions of both CO2 and methane.

And by exporting, where natural gas sells for a lot more than here, we'll just make the price of gas here in the USA so much higher. Is that good for the public interest?

And by exporting abroad, there will be less gas for us, so how could that be good for the economy here?

And why the rush? The comment period was not widely announced. That's not good public interest. We would like more time to comment on this proposal.

Thank you for your consideration.
