United States Department of Energy Office of Hearings and Appeals

In the Matter of Russell Carollo ) Filing Date: May 8, 2012 ) Case No. FIA-12-0026

Issued: June 7, 2012

Decision and Order

On May 8, 2012, Russell Carollo (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on April 19, 2012, by the Department of Energy's Office of Inspector General (OIG), in Washington, D.C., in response to a request for documents that the Appellant filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. OIG, in its April 19, 2012, determination letter, informed the Appellant, inter alia, that it neither confirmed nor denied the existence of any records described in the Appellant's request. This Appeal, if granted, would require OIG to either release any discovered documents or issue a new determination letter justifying the withholding of those documents.

I. Background

In his February 24, 2012, FOIA request (Request), the Appellant asked for the following information:

- 1. "All correspondence with or concerning in any way Masters Capital Management and/or its CEO Michael Masters. This would include, but not limited to, congressional correspondence."
- 2. "All FOIA request letters from or concerning in any way Masters Capital Management and/or its CEO Michael Masters."
- 3. "All information related in any way to any complaints of any kind (including for fraud or suspicious activity), investigations, administrative actions and/or prosecutions involving Masters Capital Management and/or its CEO Michael Masters."
- 4. "Reports of any kind about or containing information related in any way to Masters Capital Management and/or its CEO Michael Masters."

See April 19, 2012, letter from John Hartman, Assistant Inspector General for Investigations, OIG, to Russell Carollo at 1 (Determination Letter). In its April 19, 2012, Determination Letter, OIG informed the Appellant that, with respect to one portion of his request, it neither confirmed or denied the existence of any such records described in the request.<sup>1</sup> Id. The Determination Letter, citing FOIA Exemption 7(C), 5 U.S.C.  $$552(b)(7)(C)^2$  as support, went on to state that, lacking an individual's consent, an official acknowledgement of an investigation or an acknowledgement of the existence of investigatory records about an individual could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. In his Appeal, the Appellant challenges this portion of the OIG's determination.

II. Analysis

Courts have recognized, in the context of some FOIA requests, that even acknowledging that certain records are kept would jeopardize the privacy interests that FOIA exemptions are designed to protect and that a Glomar response neither confirming nor denying the existence of responsive records is appropriate. See, e.g., Antonelli v. FBI, 721 F.2d 615, 617 (7th Cir. 1983) (Antonelli). In reviewing the interests to be balanced to justify Exemption 7(C) protection, it is apparent that the request at issue might reveal whether an individual is the subject of an OIG law enforcement investigation.<sup>3</sup> The courts and OHA have consistently held that individuals have a strong privacy interest in avoiding the stigma of being associated with a law enforcement investigation. See, e.g., Fitzgibbon v. CIA, 911 F.2d. 755, 767 (D.C. Cir. 1990); Massey v. FBI, 3 F.3d 620, 624 (2d Cir. 1993); Westinghouse Savannah River Co., LLC, Case No. VFA-0556 (March 13, 2000), slip op. at 3 (Westinghouse).<sup>4</sup> This strong interest is balanced against the fact that the Appellant has not referenced any specific public interest that would be furthered by the release of the requested documents. Given these interests, I find that the potential privacy interest threatened by release of any potentially responsive documents greatly outweighs any generalized, non-specific, public interest that would be furthered by release of such potential documents. See Beck v. Dep't of Justice, 997 F.2d 1489, 1492-94 (D.C. Cir. 1994); Massey, 3 F.3d at 624; McNamera v. Dep't of Justice, 974 F. Supp. 956, 957-60 (W.D. Tex. 1997); Westinghouse, slip op. at 3. Consequently, any potentially responsive documents would be protected by FOIA Exemption 7(C). Using this rationale, the courts and OHA have upheld the use of a Glomar response where a FOIA request might reveal Exemption 7(C) information disclosing the identity of individuals who are subjects of investigations or are otherwise mentioned in law enforcement records and who have not previously waived their privacy rights. See, e.g., Dep't of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for the Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 775 (1989); Massey; Antonelli; Westinghouse.

&lt;sup>1</sup> An agency response to a FOIA Request, which states that the agency "can neither confirm or deny" the existence of responsive records because the confirmation or denial of the existence of responsive records would, in and of itself, reveal exempt information or constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy is often called a Glomar response. See Phillippi v. CIA, 546 F.2d 1009, 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1976) (raising issue of whether CIA could refuse to confirm or deny its ties to Howard Hughes' submarine retrieval ship, the Glomar Explorer). We will refer to OIG's response as a Glomar response.

&lt;sup>2</sup> Exemption 7(c) of the FOIA protects records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes but only "to the extent that production of such law enforcement records or information . . . could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii).

&lt;sup>3</sup> OHA has consistently held that OIG is a law enforcement body and its investigations and reports are records compiled for law enforcement purposes within the meaning of Exemption 7(C). See Westinghouse Savannah River Co., LLC, Case No. VFA-0556 (March 13, 2000), slip op. at 2.

&lt;sup>4</sup> OHA FOIA decisions issued after November 19, 1996 may be accessed at http://www.oha.doe.gov/foia1.asp.

We have spoken to an OIG official who was familiar with the processing of the Appellant's FOIA Request. After reviewing the subject matter of the Request, the method by which the Request was processed, and the OIG justification offered in the determination letter, we find that OIG appropriately invoked its Glomar response. Thus, we agree that providing any other response to the FOIA Request could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, such as that protected by Exemption 7(C). Consequently, the Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed on May 8, 2012, by Russell Carollo, OHA Case No. FIA-12-0026, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Poli A. Marmolejos Director Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: June 7, 2012