I am greatly opposed to transmission corridors for several reasons. First in most cases in Missouri we will have no benefit from them as we are not getting anything off of these lines or lacking in electricity as we have an adequate supply. Second most of these lines are for wind generated electricity which is very inefficient and would not even be considered if not for government subsidies and tax breaks. Third as in the case of the so called Grain Belt Express they only have a PLAN and nothing to say that this is not just a land grab for profit that would leave us with not even knowing what might be put on this easement. Also if the government changes it's policy's in the nest few years and they abandon these lines we will have nothing but the towers and lines to deal with and no financial benefits and still will have to deal with the loss of control of our land and uncertainty of the future.
