Subject: Oppose Clean Line Energy Partners, LLC,, Plains & Eastern Clean Line project

I am in opposition of this project. It is not needed or wanted. They have no guarantees the power generated will be sold to anyone. It will not benefit the people of Oklahoma or Arkansas. Tennessee Valley Authority does not want or need the possibly generated electricity.

The only thing it would accomplish is disruption and harm to the lives of the families in its path.

CLEP tells us there are no harmful affects from these lines. That has not been proven, and I tend to differ. How could it possibly be healthy to live near the constant humming and, God only knows, the potential side affects of a 600kV HVDC transmission line overhead?

No one wants to look out their window and see a metal monstrosity spoiling their once pristine view.

We chose to live in the country away from all the clutter and no view of the landscape.

What right does some company have to come on my property without my consent, tear up my land, erect towers, string lines and leave no telling what kind of mess behind?

This is my land. I worked hard to afford to live in the country. I should have some say in what happens on my land, and that doesn't include having power lines strung across it.

Suppose someone came up to you and told you they needed to borrow your car, and you had no say in the matter. Oh, but they would pay you a small one-time fee for your trouble. When you got your car back, it was trashed inside and out, and you had no recourse to make it look like it once did. And this would happen, again, and again, and again. You would have to look at that eyesore every day of your life. You could buy a new one, but you really love that car and can't bear to part with it.

We Okies are very passionate about our land and country life. Please don't let some some out-of-state millionaires disrupt the lives of so many families in Oklahoma, and Arkansas. If they want towers, why don't they build them on their own land? Oklahoma isn't the only place the wind blows.

Thank you.
