We live in a world that seeks new resources to improve or benefit the well being of our country and people that live in our country. Plains and Eastern is an independent company that proclaims to seek new resources but it is not in the best interest of Arkansas or the world and they are not given out specifics in a timely manner on their scheme. Their transmission line is not needed or necessary. Plains and Eastern seems as if they are not accepting the health or environmental risks for the citizens of Arkansas.

I'm opposed to the transmission line and eminent domain. The only ones that are not opposed to the transmission line are the ones that will make big profits. I don't understand how a company can ask for federal approval and be approved if there is no demand for it in Tennessee, the delivery point. Also, there isn't a supplier at this time. From what I've read the company has no real assets, or creditors who can tell one who is responsible yet they want to force eminent domain to get land owners for creditors to get the suppliers. This is such a sham or maybe even a scam and very obscure. I don't believe this is what clean line is really trying to do; they have not been up front to this point so it wouldn't be beneath them to continue to be underhanded and hide their real intentions. It is not time to start building wind powered transmission lines. Wind is not a constant so what would run through the lines when there's no wind.

Oklahoma doesn't have as much wind as Maryland, Massachusetts or Virginia so if the east coast wants wind power let them get it from the east. Arkansas will not benefit from this venture.

If they have their way and the company fails, the ones who will bear the brunt are landowners and citizens of the towns from the damage to their health and devaluation of the land. Clean Line Energy Partners have no customers for their service therefore they have no credit or credibility.

If you want to know who will be at risk for billionaires to make more money ask a family with a member that has cancer or a health issue caused by a so called improvement to our economy or a farmer that has lost all his crops. Really the entire US should be concerned and against this issue because it will affect the food source which will cause more health issues for the entire country. We are the ones who will be taking the risk.
